

Lisa DeNight is Managing Director and Head of North American Industrial Research at Newmark, where she leads the firm's research platform across industrial and data center sectors. Recognized as a leading voice on industrial real estate, DeNight translates complex market data into actionable intelligence for investors, occupiers, and the media, with regular appearances on broadcast news and in national publications.

With over a decade of commercial real estate research experience, DeNight has built her career at the intersection of data rigor and market narrative. Based in Miami, she speaks frequently for national and international audiences on economic and real estate trends. She began her commercial real estate research career at Newmark, held a senior research role at CBRE, and rejoined Newmark in 2019.
